Buried treasure shines brightest in the dark
The Legendary Warriors, Book 3
Ten years after she survived a cholera epidemic that wiped out her entire wagon train, Carolyn White is on a quest to shake off the bad luck that follows her everywhere and which now threatens her adopted family. The unending string of mishaps can have only one source: the gold piece that she, in childish innocence and wonder, once took from a stolen cache. She tells herself her journey to Crow Country is merely to put the piece back in the cave where she found it. Yet in her heart, she knows it's the memory of Lone Arrow, the boy who sheltered her there. The boy whose face, now that of a man, inhabits her dreams. Lone Arrow's anger knows no bounds. Anger with the white woman he suspects isn't being truthful to him. Anger with himself that he cannot ignore the beauty who captured his heart even as a boy. Though trust is in short supply, he can't deny his burning need for her. Whatever else she may be, she is his destiny. This book has been previously published. Warning: Contains a passion that could lead to soul-stirring love.
